

DINE OUT THIS WEEK...

NOT ON MENU... You won't find the cephalopoda on the menu at the Marineland restaurant, but Darla Evans points out here that you can find it—along with other abstract representations of marine life—on the walls of the popular Southland dining spot.

Marine Life Graces Walls Of Popular Dining Spot

What is a "Cephalopoda"? The "Cephalopoda," for instance, is an invertebrate type from a group of Mollusks that include the squid and the octopus. Other wall plaques display the "Sepioida," "Arcturus," "Vermes," "Seahorse" and the "Caprellid."

But don't look for them on the menu, which specializes in seafood. The marine animals are in a weirdly abstract form, as originally depicted in the Stone Age, and ornament the walls of Marineland Restaurant in a colorful burst of artistic fantasia.

Wall plaques in the dining rooms, with their fantastic sea creatures, also bear names of the marine family to which each species is related.

Your appetite probably would be more tantalized by the more savory, recognizable fish names on the menu—like broiled lobster, deviled crabmeat and baked halibut. They belong on the platter, not a plaque!

Bake Sale Planned

Cub Scout Pack 706-C will hold a Bake Sale on Saturday, May 25th, at Ralph's new store on Redondo Beach Blvd. Mothers of the boy members are donating home-made cakes, pies, cookies, and other culinary triumphs, for sale to the general public. Money raised will help provide outings for the Cubs during the coming summer.

Teacher Threatened 'If Anyone Flunks'

A Narbonne High School teacher, Francis James Lawlor, reported to sheriff's deputies that a telephone caller had threatened his life if he "flunked anyone."

Lawlor said he had received a number of calls at his home warning him not to fail any
